

TOBY THE TURKEY

AND THE

HARVEST PASTA

Once upon a time, there was a little turkey named Toby.

Toby loved pasta.
He loved bread.
He loved anything crunchy, chewy, or buttery.

But vegetables?
“No thank you!” Toby said.

Every time Farmer Grace offered him broccoli, he shook his feathers.

Every time she offered sweet potatoes, he turned his beak away.

And sage leaves?
Toby didn't even know what those were!

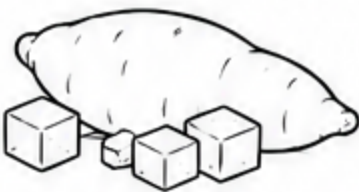

One crisp autumn morning, Farmer Grace had an idea.

She chopped sweet potatoes into tiny orange cubes.

She sprinkled fresh sage into a pan.

She cooked broccoli until it was bright green and tender.

Then she mixed everything together with shell pasta and a little maple cream sauce.

The delicious smell floated across the farmyard.

Sniff. Sniff. Sniff.

Toby followed the smell all the way to the kitchen window.

“What is THAT?” he asked.

“It's Harvest Pasta,” said Farmer Grace.

“It smells amazing,” said Toby.

He took one tiny bite.

Then another.

Then another.

The sweet potatoes tasted sweet.

The broccoli tasted buttery.

The pasta tasted cozy.

And the sage made everything taste like autumn.

Before he knew it, Toby had cleaned his whole plate.

“Wait a minute,” he said.
“I think I just ate vegetables!”

Farmer Grace laughed.

“Sometimes you just need the right recipe.”

From that day on, Toby still loved pasta.

But he learned something important:

Sometimes foods surprise you when you give them a chance.

THE END!
